

Danville pupils excel at university

Three Danville past pupils have been named recipients of prestigious awards from their universities. Teagan van Wyk (Class of 2013) is one of only four national recipients to have been awarded a prestigious award from the National Research Foundation. This Brilliants Programme recognises students who obtained top marks in Grade 12 for Maths and Physical Science. Teagan is currently a first-year student in Medicine at the University of Cape Town and credits her solid academic foundation at Danville as well as a focussed work ethic for enabling her success.

Kelly Sloley (Matric of 2005) is a Sports Masters student at UKZN who has been awarded the Distinguished Student Award for her work on a community project. Her comment on receiving the award was her hope that, “it will inspire more students to get involved in their community and use their knowledge for a better future”.

Michaela Stead (Matric 2012) is one of only five students who received a scholarship from UKZN’s College of Health. Michaela, who studies Occupational Therapy, says “...you must do what you love and follow your heart!”
